PAYROLL ROBBERS KILL TWO POLICEMEN

INNOCENT MAN HELD 9 HOURS AS MURDER SUSPECT

Former Mayor of Salisbury, Mo., Here on Business, Runs Into Modern Police Methods and Third Degree

RESULT OF LOOKING UP A CHILD'S MOTHER

Thomas H. Edwards Taken by Police on Call at House Where Gang Murder Took Place.

Thomas H. Edwards, a prominent citizen of Salisbury, Mo., while in St. Louis on business, was asked to look up the mother of a small child now being cared for by his relatives. And in undertaking this commission he ran into present-day police methods, with the result that he was held incommunicado for nine hours as a "suspect" in a gang murder, subjected to a bit of the police third degree, and released only through the efforts of a nephew who appealed to a Circuit Judge for assistance.

Edwards is 50 years old, a wealthy grain elevator operator and miller of Salisbury, former Mayor of his town, deacon of his church, and former Sunday-school superintendent. He arrived in St. Louis Monday and registered at a downtown hotel. He attended to his grain business Monday and Tuesday, but on Wednesday started out to look up a relative of his in-law, to inquire about support for a child.

The woman he sought was Lorraine La Vere, whose real name is Lorraine La Grasse. She has a child, now in the care of her husband's parents at Salisbury, who had asked Edwards to look up the child's mother. Edwards called on his nephew, N. Murray Edwards, an attorney with offices in the Pierce building, who obtained the address, which was 4604 Olive street.

Held on Call at House. Thursday morning, about 8 o'clock, Edwards rang the bell at 4604 Olive street, and a policeman opened the door from within.

"Does Lorraine La Vere or La Grasse live here?" he asked the policeman.

"What do you want with her?" the officer inquired.

"I want to see her concerning her child, which is with her parents-in-law at Salisbury, Mo.," Edwards answered.

"That stuff don't go here," said the officer, reaching out and taking Edwards by the collar.

Edwards demanded an explanation. The police laconically remarked, "Old stuff," and had him sent to the Newstead Avenue Station in a patrol wagon.

Simon J. Wallace, an ex-convict, had been murdered at the Olive street address early that morning, but Edwards had not heard of it. It was the home of Gregory H. Lewis, former proprietor of a county roadhouse, and Lorraine La Vere, or La Grasse, a manicure, was a lodger there.

Edwards held incommunicado. Edwards was put in a cell at the Newstead police station and held incommunicado, except for the detectives. He asked for permission to telephone his nephew, but this was denied.

A large detective with a black mustache strode back and forth in front of his cell, telling him that he knew more about the murder of the ex-convict than he had told. Edwards protested in vain that he had no knowledge of the crime. The detective was insistent:

"You will tell what you know of this murder, or we will kick hell out of you," the detective told him.

This remark roused the ire of Edwards. He had been a professional baseball player and all-round athlete in the heyday of his youth, and he remarked that he would ride in a taxicab to escape the humiliation of another ride in a patrol wagon, offering to pay the taxi fare for all.

This was denied him, and he was held in a patrol wagon. In the holdover, he was placed in a cell with seven other men, some of whom were negroes; but he was allowed to telephone his nephew.

DYING SOLDIER WOULD CARRY MEMORY OF SONGS OVER DIVIDE

"Let 'Em Sing, It Will Be a Happy Memory," He Said, When Harvard Club Visited Hospitals.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—When the Harvard Glee Club made a round of the soldier hospitals here Thursday and did its bit to cheer the way for the sick and disabled, it came to one where "a soldier of the legion lay dying."

There was some question as to whether the club ought to sing with the somber specter of death hovering so near. Somebody suggested that the club sing the song made by the sick soldier.

"Sure, let 'em sing," said he, with a pale, warm smile. "It will be a happy memory to carry across with me."

Yesterday he was still alive and the doctor said that maybe he wouldn't die for some time. Maybe it was the music and maybe it was his kind of nerve.

TRACT OF FARM LAND NEAR JERSEYVILLE SINKS 10 FEET

Area of Several Acres Slides to West and Pushes Public Road Out of Place.

A tract of several acres on the John T. Ryan farm, about 10 miles east of Jerseyville, Ill., has sunk to a depth of 10 feet. The land moves not only downward, but westward, and has crowded a public road, a number of feet out of its course and has encroached upon the property of Richard Ryan, across the road.

A small creek, running parallel to the public highway, will have its course changed if the slide continues.

The tract is not at the side of a hill, but lies at the edge of a gradual slope rising toward the east.

Farmers who travel over the highway report that horses' hoofs produce a hollow sound. One theory is that a subterranean lake has formed under the farm.

NOLTE TELLS WHY HE WANTS RULING ON TAX FOR ART

Not Prejudiced Against Art Because He Does Not Know Enough About It, He Says.

THINKS MUSEUM'S SHARE TOO LARGE

Complaints From All Departments Where Cuts Were Made but $3000 Bill for Door Knockers Was Paid.

Comptroller Nolte isn't prejudiced against art; he doesn't know enough about it for that, he said today, in explaining why the Board of Estimate and Apportionment yesterday voted, at his instance, to ask the City Counselor for a ruling on the legality of the tax which is levied annually for the support of the Art Museum in Forest Park.

Esthetic feeling, in his opinion, was not necessary to a consideration of the facts in the case. These facts, he felt, amply justified his contention that the Art Museum, in getting $250,000 last year, got considerably more than its share of the municipal revenue. Incidentally, he made it clear that a Comptroller's life is not a happy one, especially around the time that the budget is being made up.

Has Many Troubles. "Here was our situation," he explained. "We are trying to reduce the budget. The city hasn't money enough for its needs. Very well, what happens? The park appropriation is cut, and 10,000 golfers yell their heads off. Street Department employees are laid off, and I am told that scores of families are in distress through the men losing their jobs."

"Last year we reduced the number of municipal nurses. Dozens of women came to my office with tears in their eyes, accusing me of killing the city's babies. We reduce the appropriations of the city institutions, and all the benevolent organizations are on my back."

"But all the time that is going on, I'm getting bills from the Art Museum—$14,000 for a marble bust, $3000 for a door knocker, $12,000 for painting. And I have no choice but to pay them. Under the circumstances, it's pretty hard to swallow and I notice," he added, "that some of the Museum guards are getting $60 a month—I wonder if they can appreciate a $25,000 work of art."

His Art Experience. Comptroller Nolte said his own acquaintance with art was limited almost entirely to an experience he had several years ago, when Hadley was Governor. Nolte, Otto Stifel and Charles Houts engaged a woman artist to do the Governor's portrait, to be presented to him. Nolte and Houts inspected it, and declared they could detect no resemblance between the work and the subject. Stifel told them they didn't know anything about art. They admitted it, but said they couldn't see $1500 worth of it.

They declined to pay and the artist sued, getting a verdict for $400. Hadley, although a man of much erudition for a Governor, couldn't see the merits of the picture either, so they had Carl Waldeck paint one, which was satisfactory.

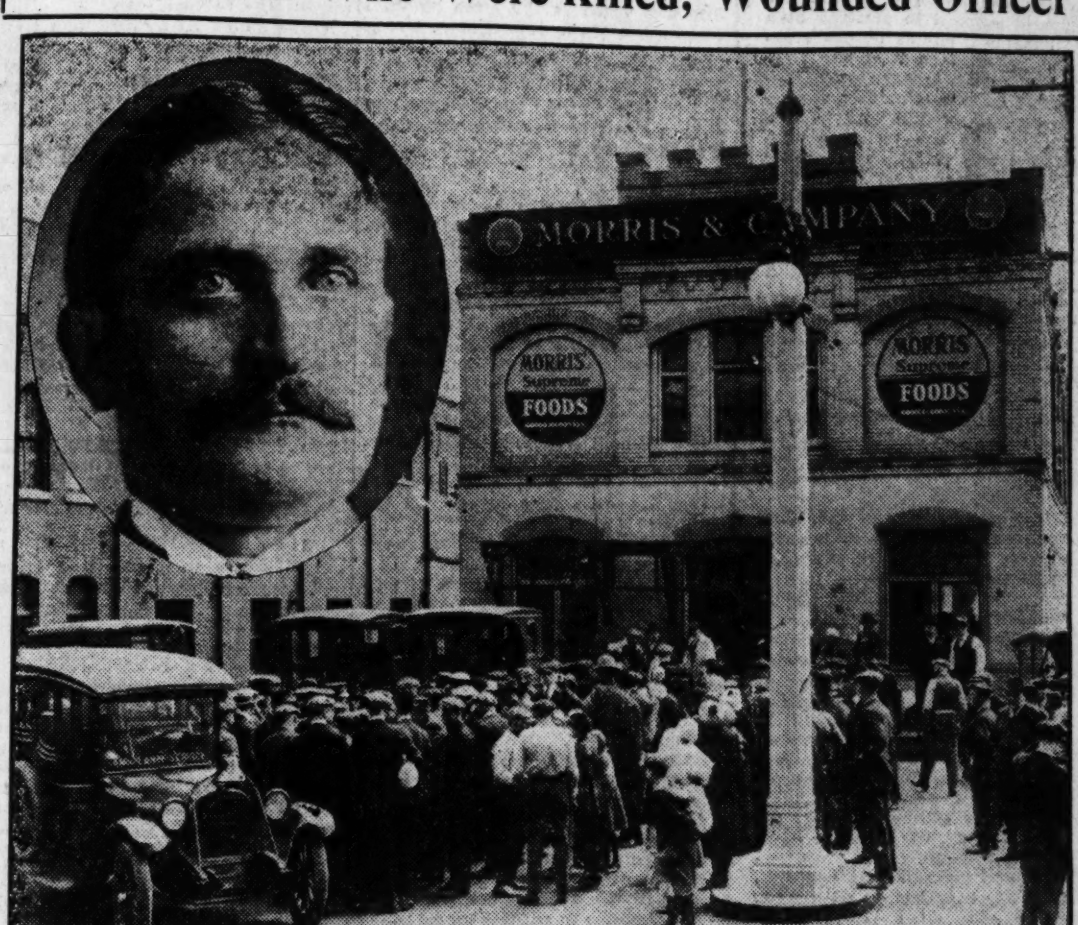

"I was out at the Museum about a year ago," said Nolte. "I remember seeing a picture of the Archbishop there. I enjoy looking at the pictures, but I'm no critic. I think it is very well to spend money that way when it isn't urgently needed elsewhere, but I can't see putting out $12,000 for a bust when we are having a hard time buying mattresses for the sanitarium."

Another aspect of the situation which is palpably irritating to city officials is the fact that the museum administration is entirely independent. The Board of Control elects its own members, and when it desires to make a purchase, the Comptroller merely receives the bill. Of course, the expenditures are limited by the museum's revenue, which is derived by a special tax levy of 2 cents on the $10 valuation.

Alone and Kiel Agree. For some years Nolte has voiced dissatisfaction with the tax and with the position enjoyed by the museum board. The matter came up again

RIVER DIVERTED TO HALT FIRES IN MUNITIONS EXPLOSION WAKE

List of Dead in Serbian Disaster Is Not Expected to Exceed 500. ATHENS, April 22.—A river has been diverted through Monastir in Serbia, where the great munitions explosion occurred Tuesday, checking the fires and small explosions that have been going on there, according to word reaching Athens today.

The rescue work is going forward rapidly. While great numbers were injured badly, the death list will not run as high as first reports had it. Advances today said that the total dead probably would not exceed 500.

LONDON, April 22.—The explosion at Monastir was the work of Macedonian revolutionists, according to a Central News dispatch from Belgrade.

SCIENTIST PRODUCES GOLD LIGHT. Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Prof. E. Newton Harvey has found means by which gold light may be obtained, according to an announcement made at Princeton University yesterday. After eight years of experimentation on the light given off certain animals, Prof. Harvey has produced a form that gives a continuous glow, by the same natural process as that carried on in the beast.

Prof. Harvey explained that the continuous glow resulted from the oxidation of luciferin, to form oxy-luciferin in the presence of another substance, luciferase. It only remains to devise a practical method of intensifying this light to make it of commercial value. This has been done to a certain degree by the reduction of oxy-luciferin, on a basis of perpetual motion in a test tube. Prof. Harvey will continue his research in the hope of developing a brighter light by this chemical reaction.

Man Is Victor in Terrific Struggle With Deep Sea Monster in Puget Sound. By the Associated Press.

TACOMA, Wash., April 22.—Fighting for his life, 50 feet beneath the surface of Puget Sound, Walter McCray, a diver, known in marine circles from Alaska to California, came out victorious here yesterday over a giant devil fish.

The monster wound its tentacles so tightly about McCray that the diver was unable to reach the knife carries for protection. When the tentacles threatened to cut off the air supply, McCray, through the submarine telephone, called for a short steel wrecking bar. With this weapon, the diver was able to pierce the body of the devil fish and at last, with man and monster still struggling desperately, McCray was drawn to the surface. The fight continued until the devil fish released its hold and disappeared beneath the water.

WOUND THIRD IN PISTOL FIGHT AND ESCAPE IN AUTOMOBILE

Shooting Follows Holdup of Wholesale Branch of Morris Packing Co. at 3000 South Broadway by Two Young Men—Policemen First to Fire—Loot Less Than $100.

Two policemen were killed and a third seriously wounded by payroll robbers whom they interrupted in the act of holding up the office force of a branch of Morris & Company, packers, at 3000 South Broadway, at 10:30 this morning. Although a dozen or more shots were fired by the policemen the robbers escaped in a waiting automobile. Their loot was less than $100. The dead policemen are:

Patrolman Michael O'Connor, 43 years old, 3420 Montana avenue.

Patrolman Bernard C. Mengel, 52 years old, 511A Wilmington road.

The wounded policeman is Louis A. Held, 49 years old, 3464 Giles avenue.

O'Connor, who was known as "Big Mike," 150 of his 220 pounds, and as "Number One," to distinguish him from other Michael O'Connors on the force, was shot through the head and is believed to have been almost instantly killed.

Mengel was struck in three places. One bullet entered his head at the right temple and ranged backward, lodging in the ear of his skull. A second bullet went through his right forearm, and a third went through his right hand. He died at the city hospital at 1 p. m.

Held was shot from an angle. One bullet entered at the rear of his right shoulder and came out at the front of the same shoulder. It is not believed to have penetrated his lung. O'Connor and Mengel were uniformed men of the Wyoming Street Station. Held, although formerly a patrolman, was out of the department for a time and had returned as a probationary patrolman.

Robbers Escape in Auto. The shooting was done by two men who had entered the office and were holding up the payroll. One of the robbers, called from the South Side Trust Co., across the street, started to enter the packing plant. After shooting them down the robbers ran out and jumped into a waiting automobile and escaped.

It is the practice for drivers' objections to be received at the branch office on Saturday, and it is supposed the robbers were aware of this and hoped to get this money, but they were too early.

Examination of the policemen's revolvers showed that O'Connor fired six shots, Held 5 and Mengel 2, but it is not known whether any of the robbers was struck, although Policeman Held thinks he wounded one.

Policeman Held's Story. The fight between the policeman and the robbers was described to a Post-Dispatch reporter by Patrolman Held after he had received emergency treatment at the city hospital as follows:

"I was standing in the lobby of the South Side Trust Co. and Mengel was there too. I had been there about 5 minutes, having just returned with a messenger who had taken some money to the Federal Reserve Bank. Mengel was getting ready to go with a messenger to deliver a payroll down further south. I think O'Connor was standing outside."

"Someone rushed in and said there was some trouble across the street. I drew my revolver and followed Mengel from the bank. We ran out into the street and it was filled with automobiles. I couldn't see O'Connor. I think he was inside the place where the bandits were. I saw Mengel fire at someone and then I saw a man fire at Mengel."

"Mengel fell, and his head lay on the platform. I fired at him who shot Mengel, and saw him double over as if he was hit. Then I fired again, but the cartridge exploded with just a dull 'plop' and I guess the bullet didn't carry very far, because the cartridge was defective."

Wounded by Robber. "Then they got me. I was hit in the right side of the chest, but I held in to my revolver and supported my right hand with my left so I could shoot. I fired the three shots remaining in my revolver into the rear end of the robbers' car. At first I didn't know which machine to use, but I saw one of the men shoot at the street."

"I did not want to hit any innocent bystanders, so I made sure of my automobile. I shot at it, I saw the bandits' machine reverse out from the curb into the traffic, and I think I saw one of the men shooting at the time."

"After my revolver was emptied, I reached with my left hand for more bullets and got them out of my pocket; but was unable to break open the breech of my revolver because my right hand seemed to be paralyzed. The next I remember, they were sitting me in the ambulance."

Patrolman Held said he could not tell how the man he believed wounded, got into the automobile, for he did not see him. Held said the robbers' car was a shabby green one, with a weather-beaten top. He thought it was an Oldsmobile touring car.

Details of the Robbery. Details of the robbery and the subsequent exchange of revolver shots were related to Post-Dispatch reporters by Charles Olsen, manager of the Morris branch.

"The five employees of the plant were being paid and only a small part of the payroll money remained in the office," Olsen stated, "when two young, nice-looking fellows, carrying revolvers, entered the office. One of them commanded: 'Throw up your hands. Give us your money.'"

"In the office with me were Delmer Berkel, assistant bookkeeper; Arthur Gardin, bookkeeper, and Joseph Fleischman, produce foreman. 'The robbers took between $100 and $150 from Berkel's drawer, $100 then a policeman appeared on the platform outside the office. The policeman took the first shot, through the glass door, but missed. One of the burglars turned and shot him dead."

"They rushed out and shot a man and policeman on the platform. They also wounded a third policeman. The robbers jumped into an automobile, where a companion was waiting for them, and vanished."

Olsen said that both robbers wore tortoise shell-rimmed glasses and gaudy coats, and that they appeared to be about 25 years old. Fleischman was also compelled to stand in a corner with his hands of the air. After the robbers fled, Fleischman ran out and picked up

Morvich Will Be Shipped to Derby Course on May 9

Owner, After Fine Workout, Announces He Will Start Colt in Paumonok.

JOHN FINN A HOT TIP

Recent Trial at Lexington Highly Praised by Experts Who Clock Him.

By Leased Wire to the Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, April 22.—Morvich, the unbeaten 2-year-old of last season, showed another impressive trial at the Jamaica track yesterday morning before his owner, Benjamin Block, and several of his friends.

Although the weather was cold, the track was bad from the recent rains and the wind reached the coldest of a mile in 1:42 3-5, hard held by McAtee through the last furlongs.

The evenness of the work is shown by the following fractional time: 1:15, 2:25, 3:37 4-5, 4:49 3-5, 1:02 3-5, 1:15 3-5 for the six furlongs; 1:28 4-5 and 1:42 3-5.

McAtee had instructions to work the 2-year-old in from 1:42 to 1:44. Morvich was full of run, however, and try as he would McAtee could not restrain him further without breaking his stride.

After the work, Fred Burlew announced that, barring accidents, he would ship Morvich to Louisville, Ky., on May 9, just four days before the Kentucky Derby is run on May 11. He still expects to give him a race in the Paumonok Handicap, on the opening day of the season here, May 1.

Fred Burlew's own candidate for the Derby—Irish Brigadier—also worked smoothly yesterday and covered a mile in 1:44 3-5 without being fully extended through the last furlong.

Derby Stars Go to Lexington. Louisville, Ky., April 22.—Only two of the probable starters among the first-string Kentucky Derby eligibles remain on the scene of action at Churchill Downs—Deadlock and Chatterbox—and they will move on to Lexington next week, leaving the local courses deserted, as far as can be seen.

Owners are not depending upon workouts to condition their charges, but are planning to enter them in actual competition. All of the Western Derby horses will participate in the Lexington meeting, and most of them will start twice.

John Finn's stock has gone skyward as the result of his recent good trial at Lexington. J. S. Ownbey, who returned from that city yesterday and witnessed his workout, said that it was one of the best trials that he ever saw, and that G. F. Baker horse could have gone much faster had his rider elected.

Eastern Entries Promised. Matt J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club, said yesterday: "I am certain that the derby field will number at least 12, and I have the positive assurance that at least six horses will come from the East. Morvich, Lucky, Good Times, Olympus and one other from the Harry Payne Whitney stable, and one of E. F. Sinclair's three-year-olds are the ones that I have in mind, and they can be depended upon."

Owner R. J. Brannon, who returned from Kansas City, took Col. Winn over to his stable at the Downs yesterday to show him his namesake, which is entered in the derby. This horse has never raced, but he worked a mile in 1:41 at New Orleans and appears to possess quite a bit of class.

Brannon told Col. Winn that the same horse will be among those present when the derby field is lined up, so he is received on his arrival in Lexington. Last night the party went to the theater, where they saw an American comedy with an American actor in the leading role.

Ferguson, Clayton and University City Win County High Contests. The University City High School basketball nine won a well-played game from Kirkwood, yesterday, on the latter's diamond, by a 2-5 score.

Kirkwood, playing for U. City, allowed the Kirkwood team only five hits and struck out six of the enemy's bats. Pitch also hurled a good game and kept the U. City men well in check until the seventh inning.

When the Deimar avenue men put on batting aprons and five runners were on base in that frame, only two extra base hits were made, both coming from getting around. Pitch was getting a two-ply wallop in the early part of the contest. The game was pretty well matched and both teams were guilty of three mistakes.

Batteries: University City, Kortkamp and Bozo; Kirkwood, Pitch and Kortkamp.

Ferguson won a loosely contested game from Webster by a 14-10 count. Numerous errors dotted the box score and the two teams knocked off play at the end of the seventh inning.

Bob Smith and Ben Fischer divided the time at third for Webster and neither man could duplicate the classy playing of Bill Lacey, who is the guard of the third corner, who is the chief with an injured hand.

Clayton handled the Webster nine a neat trimming by a score of 11-12. Heavy hitting was very much in vogue and the garden men on base were kept busy during the entire contest.

DEMPSEY DEPARTS FOR PARIS AND LATER WILL MAKE TOUR OF CONTINENT. By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 22.—Jack Dempsey, with Jack Kearns, his manager, and Teddy Hayes, his trainer, and two other members of his party, left today for Paris to begin a tour of the Continent which will last for about a fortnight.

After a few days' stay in Paris, the party will go to Berlin, Vienna and Spain for brief visits.

FIELDING YOST MAY RETIRE AS DIRECTOR. GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 22.—Fielding H. Yost, for years leader of the University of Michigan football squad and athletic director of the university, is considering retiring from active management of the eleven, possibly at the close of next season.

"As soon as I can organize my department so that I am confident that football teams will receive proper coaching, then I will step out, and gladly," the coach said.

What is generally considered the greatest Southern golf season in the history of the sport has come to a close, the finale coming when the last shot was played at the White Sulphur Springs tournament recently. The pros, almost to a man, have now returned to their various clubs, where they will be encoined for the remainder of the year, with interruptions in the case of the national, P. G. A., Metropolitan, Canadian and Western open, and several other events of lesser import.

It may be that a few will cross the water divide to play in the British open championship, but at the present look of things this year's invasion will in no wise approach that of last, at least from the standpoint of numbers.

Thirteen open tournaments of importance, with the inaugural Southern open at New Orleans and the North and South open at Pinehurst as outstanding features, were on the program for the professionals this season, and when they were completed the star of a home-bred was in the ascendency for almost the leading pros of America were entered in one or more of these tournaments, the lion's share of the honors fell to the lot of young Gene Sarazen, the former Westchester champion, whose name was learned on links in the Metropolitan district and as club maker under George Sparling at Brooklawn.

This youthful player, pitting his golf skill against that of the best of the home and foreign bred professionals, most of them veterans, emerged with as great, if not the greatest, record ever made in the course of the Southern tournament season, and a record seldom surpassed anywhere. As a result of his work during the past few months, the glowing predictions made at the time that he first sprang into public eye by giving Jack Hutchinson, the British as well as P. G. A. title holder, one of the most decisive trouncings ever doled out to a golfer of top ranking, have come true.

Placed in Many Tournaments. Participating in 10 of the 13 tournaments held in the Southland, Sarazen, who is now the professional at the Highland Country Club in the Pittsburgh golf district, emerged with one victory, which he gained in the first Southern open championship test at New Orleans. He was second in three others, tied for third once, finished fourth another time, was seventh in the West Coast open, tied for ninth once and was eighth in the only three occasions, once in the Antonio tournament, in which he placed seventeenth, and again in the North and South. Not figuring in the North and South, in which he withdrew, Sarazen played a total of 576 holes in 255 strokes for an average of 45.276, or 4.1-11. In seven of the 72-hole events he was 300 or under.

As a result of his sterling work there are many who are now satisfied that the youngster is even now capable of holding his own with such stars at Barnes, Hutchinson and Hagen, and that within the next few years he will be the holder of the national title. There are many who hold that he is the most promising

Sarazen Proved Star of Southern Golf Tournaments

Young Home-Bred Player Was Unplaced in Only Three Events During Spring.

What is generally considered the greatest Southern golf season in the history of the sport has come to a close, the finale coming when the last shot was played at the White Sulphur Springs tournament recently. The pros, almost to a man, have now returned to their various clubs, where they will be encoined for the remainder of the year, with interruptions in the case of the national, P. G. A., Metropolitan, Canadian and Western open, and several other events of lesser import.

It may be that a few will cross the water divide to play in the British open championship, but at the present look of things this year's invasion will in no wise approach that of last, at least from the standpoint of numbers.

Thirteen open tournaments of importance, with the inaugural Southern open at New Orleans and the North and South open at Pinehurst as outstanding features, were on the program for the professionals this season, and when they were completed the star of a home-bred was in the ascendency for almost the leading pros of America were entered in one or more of these tournaments, the lion's share of the honors fell to the lot of young Gene Sarazen, the former Westchester champion, whose name was learned on links in the Metropolitan district and as club maker under George Sparling at Brooklawn.

This youthful player, pitting his golf skill against that of the best of the home and foreign bred professionals, most of them veterans, emerged with as great, if not the greatest, record ever made in the course of the Southern tournament season, and a record seldom surpassed anywhere. As a result of his work during the past few months, the glowing predictions made at the time that he first sprang into public eye by giving Jack Hutchinson, the British as well as P. G. A. title holder, one of the most decisive trouncings ever doled out to a golfer of top ranking, have come true.

Placed in Many Tournaments. Participating in 10 of the 13 tournaments held in the Southland, Sarazen, who is now the professional at the Highland Country Club in the Pittsburgh golf district, emerged with one victory, which he gained in the first Southern open championship test at New Orleans. He was second in three others, tied for third once, finished fourth another time, was seventh in the West Coast open, tied for ninth once and was eighth in the only three occasions, once in the Antonio tournament, in which he placed seventeenth, and again in the North and South. Not figuring in the North and South, in which he withdrew, Sarazen played a total of 576 holes in 255 strokes for an average of 45.276, or 4.1-11. In seven of the 72-hole events he was 300 or under.

As a result of his sterling work there are many who are now satisfied that the youngster is even now capable of holding his own with such stars at Barnes, Hutchinson and Hagen, and that within the next few years he will be the holder of the national title. There are many who hold that he is the most promising golfer that America has produced since Johnny McDermott, who tied for the open title in 1910 and won it in the two succeeding years. Speaking of Sarazen the other day, one of the professionals who followed the tournaments in the South said that the youngster's record was one that he had never seen matched. "Sarazen is the most promising player I have ever seen," he said. "Although barely out of his teens, he already ranks with Barnes, Hutchinson or any of them. He is a wonderful long player, a fine putter and great with his irons. Added to that he has the best golf temperaments one of the finest golf temperaments I have ever seen. Never flustered by the brinks, with plenty of confidence in himself, Sarazen is a player from whom great things can be expected in the near future."

SUMMARY OF SEASON. Considered the overwhelming preponderance of the foreign-bred professionals as against the home-bred, the results of the Southern season augurs well for the latter. Out-numbered four and even five to one in most of the tournaments, the American-born professionals won five firsts against eight for their four one-half thirds against eight. Figuring the results of the 12 tournaments on a point basis, the home-bred totalled 77 points as against 114 for the foreign-bred. The summary of the Southern tour-naments, with the scores of the leaders, follow:

STEEL FEATURE WEEK-END TRADE- ON STOCK MARKET

Active Short Session and Prices Are Firm—Lack-wanna and Midvale Steels
Sell at New High Prices—
Bonds Steady.

By Leased Wire From the New York
Post-Dispatch, April 22.—The New York Stock Exchange today closed with a slight advance.

To an active short session with volume of sales totaling well over the half million mark, stocks displayed a firm, steady interest, well centered chiefly among the industrial and especially the steel shares.
Belief that most of the mills had ample reserves of coal led to buying and some of the independents, such as Lackawanna and Midvale, made new high prices. Republic Steel, a Cleveland-based stock, was a feature. United States Steel was bid up 3/8, but then recovered fractionally. The rails were steady, but for the most part reflected the exception of New Haven. The stock of this road added to its recent improvement by an early gain of a point. Bonds were steady.

"Good demand for European currencies came into the exchange market and prices generally were at higher levels. Volume of business transacted, however, was only fair.
Sterling, francs and lire all improved their position, although gains were only moderate. Canadian exchange was a strong feature, the price at 93.12 reaching its previous high level for the year.

"Today was a holiday on the local cotton market, the exchange moving into its new quarters. Trading in wheat was brisk. Following its gain of 3/4 cents yesterday, the May future after opening 1/2 lower quickly advanced 2 cents for a new high on the movement. A reduction in the available supply, increased export demand and reports of further crop damage helped prices.

"The weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Bank reflects more business activity, with an increase in loans of $12,000,000, the total now standing at $4,490,000,000. This contrasts with a reduction last week of $7,500,000. Reserves in Federal reserve member banks made another gain, increasing by $1,545,000, while total demand deposits rose $2,183,000 and time deposits $1,182,000. United States deposits amounted to $7,412-000, as against $7,415,000 last week.
An aggregate reserve of $14,454,000 at which figure excess reserve was $1,613,860, an increase over last week of $4,291,120.

Wall Street News and Comment —SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Trading in stock set a still more lively pace in the two hours business this morning.
Transactions approximated the million-share mark, which meant the largest average hourly total of any day so far with the exception of last Saturday.

This enormous turnover was accompanied by generally advancing prices, especially in the industrial field. It was not a wild advance, but rather steady, impetus of outside buying orders absorbing the offerings which the Wall Street syndicates and the buyers of last autumn and winter were letting go.

The Bond Market.

Greater New York City transactions were the feature of today's bond market. New high prices for the year were reached by the Third Avenue adjustment 5s, Interborough refunding 5s and Hudson & Manhattan income 4s, all rising a point to 2 points above Friday's close. Their strength appeared to reflect fresh confidence that the local transit tangle would be straightened out satisfactorily.

Liberty bonds were unchanged, while the foreign currency market would have remained around their top prices with a new high for Chile Development 5s of 15 1/2 at the Eastern Illinois 4s of 1931 also got up to that figure. Chile Corp 5s were at their highest just below 31. Public utility and steel bonds kept steady.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLAT-

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The name and address of the author must accompany every contribution but no request will be published. Letters not exceeding 200 words will receive preference.

"The Door of Light."

NOTE: In the papers that the French and other delegates to the Genoa conference, who are struggling blindly in an effort to avert impending disaster in Europe by some magic formula that will still enable them to "get away with the plunder" now are in panic, claiming that the Germans and the Russians have "stabbed the conference in the back" by the signing of their peace and resumption of business contract between those two countries.

The fact is, that the Germans and Russians have opened the door of light and truth, and which paves the way to the only solution of the European situation that can restore confidence, bring permanent peace, restore credit and make for stability in the business world and in the masses.

Armies maintained to coerce and extort won't do it, and it will be worse for the masses in the collecting nations than it will be for the masses in those nations that are forced to pay.

Such a situation, where booty by extortion is swept into the political maw, is rotten, not only in the country doing it, but for everybody, everywhere, and can only result in protracted uncertainty, unrest, unemployment, crime waves and increasing demoralization, until more wars and revolutions will result the world over.

Cancel every war debt and claim of whatever nature between all nations and get down to honest work, as Germany and Russia have agreed to do, and instantly peace, faith and credit have been restored.

As if by magic business will revive with demand for goods, unemployment will cease, armies disband, crime waves diminish, humanity in the masses will be saved.

If the peanut politicians and grafting blood leeches cannot see the light, then the world must drift on from worse to worse until chaos and demoralization will force the masses to arise and force a change through overthrow by force. It seems as though there are few leaders in politics anywhere honest and strong enough to come out with honesty and truth, when that very thing is what all the people want.

J. E. H.

Neither Reed nor Long.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
W HED does not seem to me run for the Senate on the Democratic ticket when the people really want and have confidence in? Are we compelled to choose between Reed and Long? Who wants either of these, outside of their own parties? Long is merely a rich man. Reed is an able man, but "it doesn't mean anything." What has he ever done? We want a real representative—a business man, not an orator, who will honestly and ably represent the people and do it in a common sense way. Where is the man? JUNIUS JR.

The Press and Reed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The announcement of the only remaining morning newspaper in St. Louis that it would oppose the nomination of Senator Reed, lines up completely the so-called independent and Democratic press against the Senator.

All of these papers were supporters of President Wilson in his fight for the League of Nations. Senator Reed was the only outstanding great Democrat in the Senate who opposed it, and the issue and stand taken by Senator Reed was approved by 7,000,000 people.

It appears that Woodrow Wilson comes first, regardless of what the American people stand for.

Nothing in my hand I bring.

Simply to thy league I cling.
The ridiculous fight on Senator Reed is more than similar to the fight of the Southern sympathizers on Senator Benton. It also has its analogy in the worship of Jefferson Davis and the hatred of Abraham Lincoln. And yet, today, all Democrats see a halo on the head of the great married President.

Senator Reed will make his great fight. It matters little to Senator Reed whether he is elected or not; he can afford the consequences better than the people of Missouri.

J. C. FISHER.

As You Wish, Reed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The Globe-Democrat's editorial which appeared in the issue of April 19 comes out flat-footedly in opposition to the re-nomination of Senator Reed because it asserts he uses his talents for destruction rather than for construction.

In my humble opinion, we could advantageously use a half-dozen or dozen more men of the caliber of Senator Reed in Congress, in view of the "constructive" attitude of our present Congressmen who are blindly attempting the Federalization of the United States at the expense of State government.

I agree with the senior Senator of Missouri in that he does not owe allegiance to any one man. His allegiance is to his State and his country. More power to him.

PAUL.

GOV. HYDE'S DECISION.

Gov. Hyde's decision to reorganize the Board of Police Commissioners, with Victor J. Miller out of the presidency if not out of the board, which, of course, is the logical sequence, will be commended by a great majority of citizens, regardless of party affiliations. The Governor's action is belated, but judicious and right.

It is characteristic of Miller's demagogic and unscrupulous methods that he tries to hold up the Governor and justify his own offenses by reflecting upon the motives and character of those who demand his removal and upon the action of the Governor by making it appear that the opposition to him is prompted by dirty politics in order to placate the lawbreakers of the underworld. He assumes that he is the embodiment of law and order and is the only man who can and will enforce the law. Gov. Hyde aptly punctures this assumption and renews his pledge to have the laws enforced and vice and crime suppressed by competent officials.

It is not a question of the suppression of vice and crime, which is eagerly desired by all the law-abiding people of St. Louis. It is a question of methods and of judgment and of a decent regard for the rights, the good name and the sensibilities of the people of St. Louis whom Miller has ruthlessly offended and defamed and of the fair reputation of the city and the schools which he has blackened. It is a question of lawful methods which bring the law and law enforcement into contempt and arouse popular hostility. The Governor states the whole case when he says: "The big fact which stands out above all others is that Mr. Miller has forfeited public confidence and thereby seriously impaired his own usefulness." Crediting him with the fullest measure of energy, the good is more than offset by his offensive methods.

We indulge the hope that under better police direction vice and crime will be suppressed, particularly the murderous activities of criminal gangsters and bandits, and the laws thoroughly enforced without official lawlessness or swashbuckling scurrility.

A PINCHING FOR TAXPAYERS.

Taxpayers will shake their heads in despair or frown with indignation at any decision to increase the city tax rate, an increase which seems inevitable if the expenses of the city are to be met.

Let them protest and deplore. If we are to have a city that holds its own among cities as a place of residence we must have a full-functioning city government that supplies full service to its inhabitants. Let us have such a full-functioning government and then let's examine into the question of why it costs so much. By the use of available methods, backed by energy and leadership, the expense of city operation surely can be reduced.

We are in full sympathy with the taxpayers, but we want a full-fledged city. If the taxpayers will not act until they are pinched, then progress seems to demand a friendly but businesslike pinching.

The E. in Gov. E. Mont. Rally, it is reported, will soon be Ex.

UNITED RAILWAYS VALUE.

The present value of the entire property of the United Railways is placed at $40,000,000 by C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for St. Louis, testifying before the Public Service Commission. There is a wide gap between this figure and the claims set forth for the company by Col. A. T. Perkins, manager for the receiver.

The capitalization of the company, Col. Perkins stated, is $103,000,000 and the investment $130,000,000. He remarked further that "bare-bone" value does not include the intangible assets, conspicuous among which is the long-time contract with the Keokuk dam company. Other intangible assets listed by this witness are rights of way, acquired, in some instances, for trifling outlays but valued highly now in the company's books.

With the accuracy of those entries in the U. R.'s books neither the St. Louis public nor the Public Service Commission need be more than casually concerned. The principle implied in Col. Perkins' testimony, however, is of vital public concern. According to that principle the St. Louis public is to receive no benefit whatever from the purported capable management of the United Railways. Indeed, instead of being benefited the people are to be penalized. When a good bargain is made, like the purchase of a right of way, for example, by the building of a fence, the investment expands. Similarly with an advantageous contract—such as that for Keokuk power. Always the company is the beneficiary, always the public is the goat. On this principle, if a marvelous invention should reduce the company's operating expenses by 50 per cent, say, there could be no reduction in fares.

because with the scratch of a pen the company would increase its "investment" sufficiently to show that present fares, or even higher fares, were necessary to earn a fair return.

Now, suppose the management of the United Railways makes a bad bargain—suppose it makes an unfortunate contract, say, as the Laclede Gas Co.'s famous coal contract? Who pays them? In the case of the gas company the public has had to pay. What about the expenditures of the United Railways in municipal elections? What of the costs incurred in importing expert cracksmen and accomplished burglars? Have those disbursements been woven into the golden story of the books and the burden handed down to the passengers?

It is a notorious fact that investors in United Railways stocks, as well as the St. Louis public, have been ruthlessly plundered. For redress the investors must look to the courts. The plundering of the public ought to stop, and the Public Service Commission should stop it.

A WORTH-WHILE MUSIC WEEK.

Music Week in St. Louis presents an opportunity which needs definition. A vague purpose in setting aside the week would be productive of neither definite nor lasting results. A mere "thought to music" is a thing that may be had every day. Unless it is translated into purpose it means nothing.

To value music merely as an advertising medium for the city or as a utility to soothe the savage breast and keep it out of jail is to ignore its very essence. For its essence is spiritual and its production is art.

Music itself needs no boosting. It is a medium of emotion as universal as truth, beauty and goodness. The business of Music Week should be concerned not with those who don't want music. There are too many who do want it and for whom something can and should be done to get it. Let's assume that we all enjoy music. What, then, can be done to get more of it and to improve the quality of what we do get?

Music Week might well be devoted to two purposes: First, to educate the public taste and, second, to bring music more easily within the reach of the great numbers who are without the means to attend its performance or to cultivate their own music-producing talents.

To make it easy for the public of St. Louis to hear good music is to insure the achievement of both these purposes. Already the city has made gratifying progress in this direction. It offers the public a season of Symphony Orchestra concerts at less than cost. It is distinguished among cities in supplying light opera at cost under municipal auspices and in an unique and charming environment. It has also an opera chorus training school free to all who qualify and agree to participate in the performances.

It can do more. The greatest need of St. Louis at present for the furtherance of music is a municipal auditorium for concerts and grand opera. The city government should reverse its action of last summer in cutting down or entirely abolishing band concerts in the parks. It should have more of this music and keep the quality high.

Let the people hear good music and they will demand more. Popular appreciation of the best in music will assert itself if not stifled and debased by pandering to cheap tastes. Even with such a musical palate cheap music has no permanence. Taste will improve.

A Music Week that were not worth while would mean nothing. A Music Week fully worth while would arouse enthusiasm and strengthen purpose that would bear fruit in a year of achievement.

The Fordney tariff rates are considerably higher than the Payne-Aldrich rates of hallowed memory, but as a matter of fairness it should be said that in the 1920 campaign the grand old party did not repeat the mistake of promising a "revision downward."

A BURNING HOUSE.

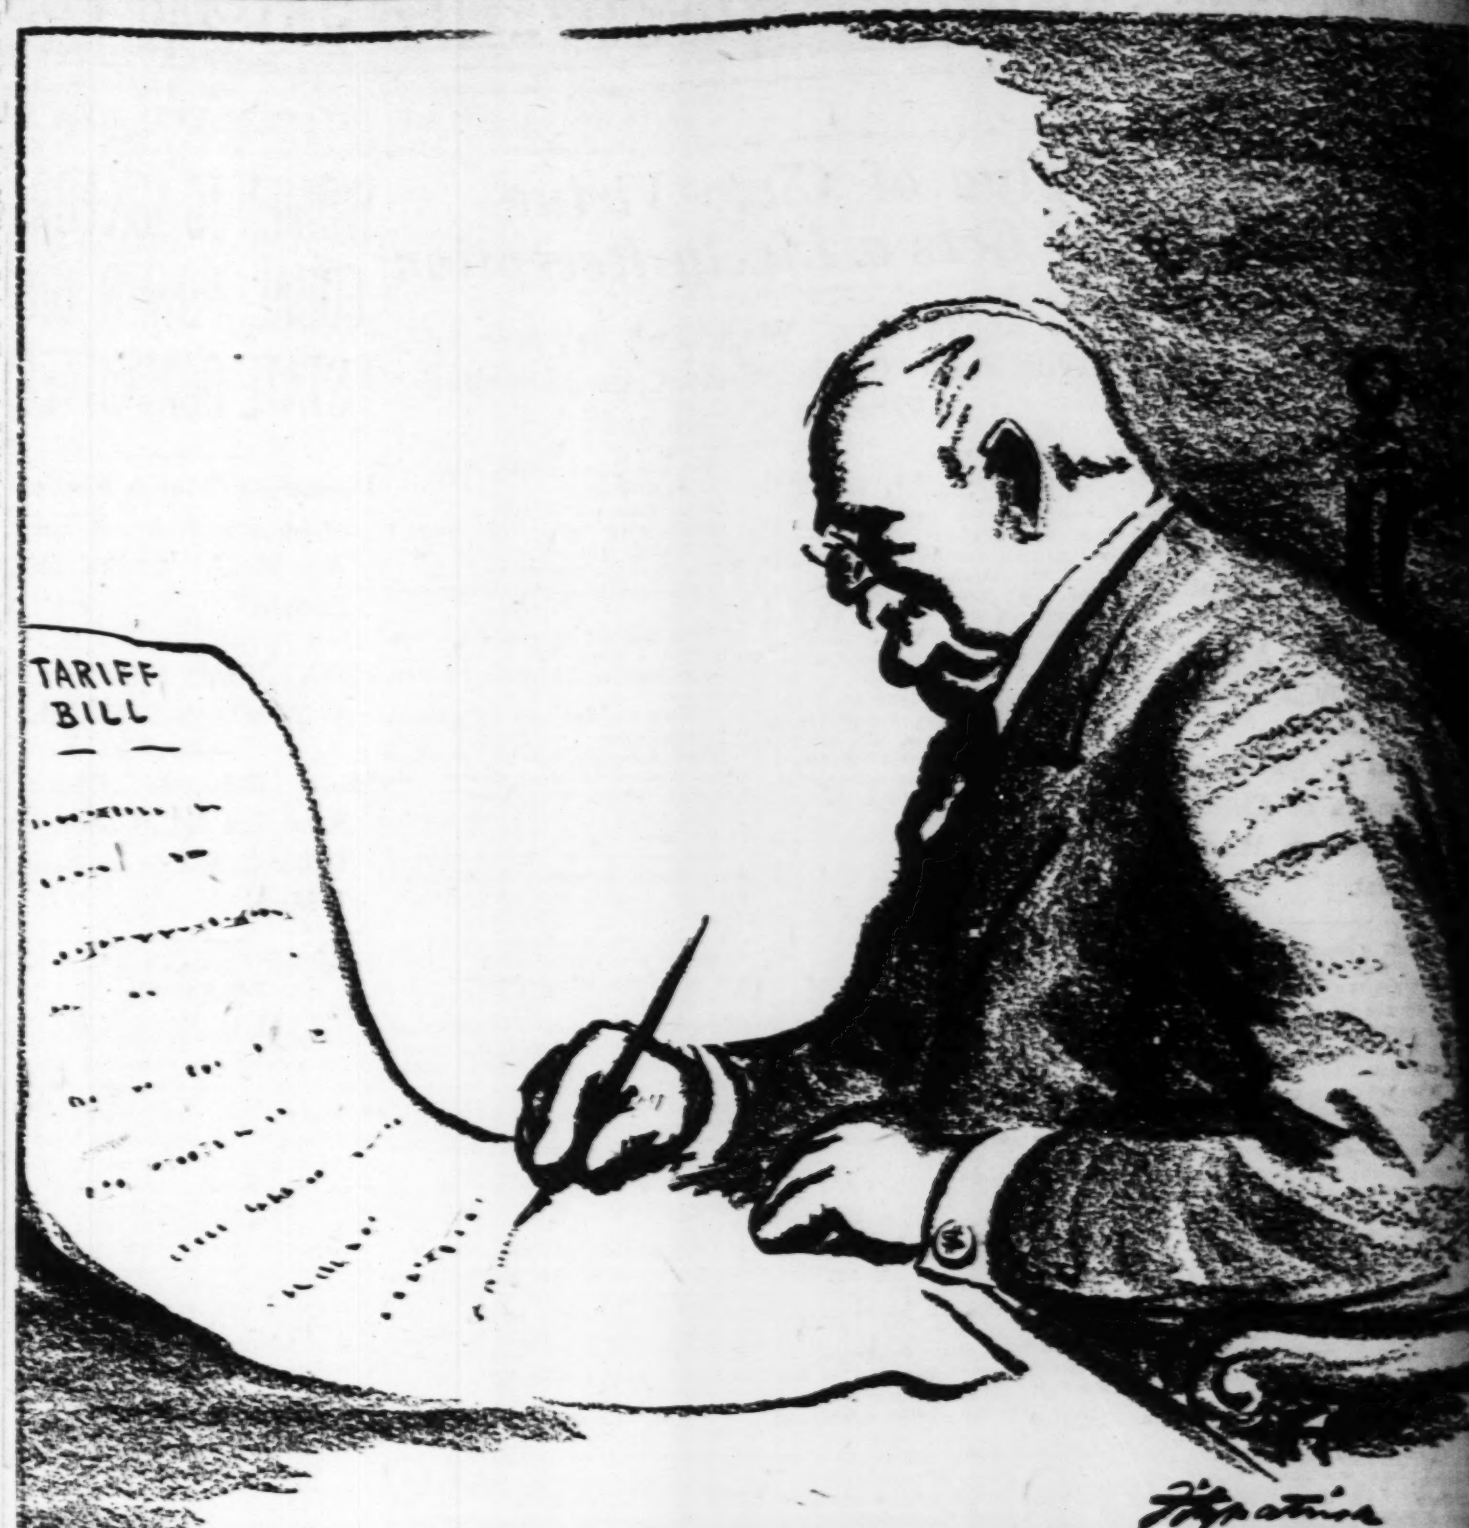

In her opening joust with the reporters on her return home Lady Astor displayed the tact and wit that contributed so much to her winning the distinction of being the first woman elected to the House of Commons. She explained she was not going to chant the Anglo-American hymn, was not going to tell us as a people what we ought to do, was not even going to instruct our statesmen. But asked as to whether we should be present at Genoa, she promptly queried back:

"Was it right for England to attend the Washington conference?" She further ventured that, when a neighbor's house is on fire, it is good common sense to help put it out.

She did not say it, but left us to ruminate that helping put out the fire would be especially sensible when one had from ten to fifteen billion dollars' worth of bric-a-brac in the burning house.

RADIO broadcasting presents such a confusion of opportunities that we have difficulty picking one out. Jack Blanton of the Monroe County, Mo. Appeal has isolated one. He says:

"What country church will be first to install a wireless outfit and dispense with the regular pastor? It is only a question of time until the present unsatisfactory once-a-month preaching arrangement will be replaced with regular sermons by radio at a central station from which hundreds of rural churches will be served. This will not only insure a preaching service twice every Sunday, regardless of weather or roads, but will also provide just as able pulpit talent for the country congregation as the city church enjoys. Coming, as it is, just as the supply of country pastors is threatened with extinction, the wireless may prove the salvation of the rural church as well as an agency for the salvation of souls."

Mr. Laaker, chairman of the Shipping Board, wants to name the Levathian after President Harding, which will likely popularize Mr. Laaker around the White House even if almost nobody else does like the idea. Maybe the forty-nine employees in the Government Printing Office who recently lost their jobs might have perpetuated themselves in office by putting the picture of Mr. Harding upon an occasional bank note.

It is quite natural that the city should feel at such a time as this that it cannot afford money for art at the City Art Museum, which illustrates the wisdom of keeping art out of the scramble for money before the Board of Estimate. If it ever got down into that pit it would be a dead cock. We would merely live in St. Louis as William Allen White tells us people live in Kansas, and our souls would not be on speaking terms with us even in this life or the next.

The way in which our art museum is maintained has commanded the admiration and envy of other American cities. They consider the situation in St. Louis something of a model, and let us hope it may be kept a model. It is not likely that there will ever be a time when the pressing needs of the municipality, many of which are political, will leave anything for such spiritual expression as we have in the City Art Museum. Henry Adams could not see how people could live here without more of such expression than we have. We must have more, but we cannot get it in competition with purely municipal causes.

This is the part of the decoration of the State Capitol escaped by virtue of the capitol tax fund. Had the cost of decorating the capitol come into competition with state causes not even the income tax would have provided money for what is to become the chief boast of the state. The capitol is being decorated with money voted for the building, and the decorations are being paid for as an integral part of the building. Exotic causes cannot compete with humane causes. For that reason Europe is dying spiritually while America is enjoying spiritual birth. Europe is too much concerned about bread to care about the things which have made her glorious. People struggling for bread have no spiritual expression. They leave neither music nor painting, neither literature nor philosophy. There is neither the glory that was Greece nor the grandeur that was Rome.

We had a city here once made by people like that. It was over at Cahokia.

SELECTION.

Sure, you're right, Plimthorpe, ole top; but why stop when you have made but one point—why not come on down to date? We, who think we think, feel that from the first moment of conscious cross fertilization, there has been natural selection.

When the female of the species found she could shed her feathers and her fur as a lure, and as a fire-tender could begin to take on fat, and with the fat, lines of beauty, or curves, to lure her mate, she knew the one who could gain the curliest curves on bosom, thigh and ankle could select, as the father of her children, the bravest hunter, the quickest killer, with his newfangled double-barreled sling-shot. And so the race as you say, grew stronger and handsomer. Are you not better looking than your parents were? Are your children not better looking than you? Mine are.

But after the high selections, all along the fringes, were those not so desirable, not so strong, still they managed to escape the wolves and the coy blasters; and while they were not so highly endowed mentally and physically, still their mating instincts were just as strong. So they too, selected and reproduced—sometimes they took what was left and the result is our morons, our mentally deficient, our physically diseased.

Get on the mailing list of the Missouri Commission for Public Charities and be appalled by our bursting almshouses, where the physically unfit are herded with the sometimes criminally insane and allowed to breed their kind. Multiply this by every state in the union that has no preventive legislation and be shocked at the burden that is growing for civilization. Civilization, what?

When ole Miss Stone Hatchet tried out the best way to bank her fire so that she might give a little more time to her young, she was beginning to think; and we modern mothers, being just the same under the skin, are trying to think how we, too, may safeguard our young. You don't want your children to mate below their own physical and mental standard, do you Plimthy?

An "interesting case" was related to me by a social worker recently. A hopelessly idiotic woman is about to bring her fourth child into the world, and that it will be as she and her other three children are, "wala va wala dila;" and the State of Illinois having no law to sterilize this human incubator, must feed and keep her growing imbecile brood.

Doctors are, as a rule, such conservatives, that when they are asked why they do not do away with the hopelessly deformed or diseased at birth, usually hide behind: "We are here to save life, not to take it," when the truth is no man wants the burden of taking human life; but if he were backed by his state or a commission, then he could be assuasive after they had judged. Photographs and blood tests would be his arguments.

There are more of us new voters who are trying to learn to think than are dreamed of in any philosophy. O Plimthorpe, then why not help us?

Some of us are still frivolous, some of us still cultivating the curves and other allurements; but many in the herd would be glad to know that to do to extend our help to the betterment of the race and would follow if shown the way. Indeed we'd go beyond what our male law-makers have done or left undone, or feared to do, and help pass laws whereby the X-ray would be used to patently sterilize these undesirable, these unfortunate offspring of the "unselected," thus ridding them personally of undesirable parenthood, and society of this growing burden.

Aw, go on Plimthy, show us—I double dare you!

THE MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

FROM DEMOCRACY TO EMPIRE.

Rocky Mountain News Editorial.

IN the incisive manner of drawing a national indictment employed by Joseph Pulitzer, its editor and owner, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has brought before the country a clear-cut issue that would have been considered sufficient in other years on which to build a new party, or at least to revivify an old party devoid of material on which to go before the country with some hope of success. The matter in view is an editorial attack on the Governors of the individual states "to lead the march toward Federal empire." An editorial and severe indictment is lodged against Congress in transgressing the rights of the states and of the public for its indifference in permitting this. The indictment of the framers of the Federal Government has been set at naught; fears of the Federalists of that day have been proved not to have been vain; what was prophesied by states' rights advocates in the state assemblies have now become true, we are told in the striking editorial. Guarantees of free speech and freedom of the press have been nullified. Rights guaranteed to citizens by the Constitution have been ignored and the fundamental principles behind the document: "Federal aid" for that, and the one thing that has further extended the powers of the centralized government, which, like the octopus, ever reaching out for more. Except in the Federal States, Federalism means more and more every year in Federal taxation. The right to life is the right to destroy. The newspaper has been a number of but not all the intrusions of centralized government upon the individual states. It had looked West it would find the central government in complete control of much more than the acres of some of the states and half or more than half the acres of others. It would find slavery landlording in full swing and the Federal Government getting into its stride. But enough. No one can question the gravamen of the charges brought by the St. Louis publication. The editorial is to centralized government and a despotic bureaucracy, the one a complement to the other. The courts are upholding the legislative and executive bodies in this movement toward governmental concentration and abolition of the rights guaranteed to the single states. CONAN DOYLE EXHIBITS

Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle presented before a large audience in Carnegie Hall last night more than a dozen spirit photographs of dead persons, described how he had taken them with scientific elimination of any human agency but his hands in their making and declared fraud was beyond the scope of any reasonable explanation of these and other experiments which had convinced him of the availability of communication with the departed.

"When the chief magistrate of this great city condescends to make reference to my private life," Sir Arthur began his lecture, "in saying I am 'working' in the 'shells,' I mean to say that I have never taken a holiday in my life for my platform work."

The speaker smiled as he thus alluded to Mayor Hylan's references to his work here and his audience, smiling with him, burst into a ripple of laughter as Sir Arthur ended his words.

Photograph Not Shown.

The lecture, "Recent Psychic Evidence," was advertised with the statement that the lecturer would reproduce on a screen what he believed to be "the most remarkable psychic photograph ever taken," this being a photograph of an astral form leaving its body after death. No such photo was displayed and no explanation of its absence was given.

The spirit photographs exhibited produced a distinct impression on all in the hall, as did Sir Arthur's report of the method of taking them. He said one, a picture of his dead son, was made at Crews, England, that he had been taken at Crews at Manchester, taken then at Crews, placed then in the plate-holder, placed the plate-holder on top of the camera and removed them after the exposure.

The first effort to obtain a picture of the spirit of his son, the lecturer said, had proved unsuccessful, but the second, under exact, similar conditions, had on development shown a hazy but identifiable picture. This had been identified by many persons who had known his son. The collection of similar photographs shown embraced many, he said, taken on plates of varying degrees of living persons.

Persons who sought pictures of the spirits of their departed often send the plates of photos of themselves to mediums, said Sir Arthur, and these are placed in cameras and subsequently disclose that pictures of the spirits sought are photographed on the same plate beside the face of the relative or dear living friend of the dead.

Declares Fraud Eliminated.

In assuring his audience that consideration of fraud in making such experiments as those he and others of scientific education and method believe exclusively is entirely eliminated, Sir Arthur said:

"Men of the character and standing who have made these experiments and produced these results by the use of scientific research do not go around the world dealing in fraud. These spirit photographs may be open to many explanations and any of them may be correct, but the element of fraud must be eliminated entirely. It has been eliminated. I am always challenged where I lecture, but I never pay attention to such challenges."

In explaining what he calls the "mediumship"—the spirit body which he believes is the basis of the medium projects—Sir Arthur said that it is vaporous at first, slightly luminous, and becomes viscous, soft, and unlike putty. He said he had produced such ectoplasm. When the medium is in a trance he exudes this ectoplasm, said the lecturer, which may be projected along the floor or from parts of the body.

In explaining the power of mediums to raise the dead and other phenomena, Sir Arthur said the ectoplasm stands at right angles to the medium's body at times and becomes rigid, so that it may be used as the lever of a beam of which the medium's human body is base and fulcrum.

SING FOR TRAVELERSSome 9000 Will Be Combined Into Quartets Which Will Perform on All Pullman Trains.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 22.—Nine thousand Pullman porters combined into more than 4000 quartets will sing for the traveling public on all Pullman trains. The Pullman company announced that training is now going on. The "Blue" and all their varieties will be mostly shunted to a siding and a new era of ballads and comic songs inaugurated. Maj. N. C. Smith, a premier negro musician and teacher, has been in training with the men. He was head of the music department at Tuskegee Institute. The company divides the United States into eight zones, in each zone a chorus, each chorus to have at least 50 voices. The first public try-out came today. On three of the special trains that left on the Illinois central for the Knights Templar convalescent camp at New Orleans, consisted of tenors, second tenors, baritone and basses. Each train had its quartet or octet.

MRS. NELLIE KAUFFMAN'S ESTATE
TO BE DIVIDED AMONG CHILDRENSon and Daughters to Receive Equal Portions of Property of Widow of Grain Dealer.

The will of Mrs. Nellie B. Kauffman, widow of John W. Kauffman, a grain merchant, divides her estate equally among her three children—Harold M. Kauffman, Mrs. Leslie L. Thompson and Mrs. Ellis Fischel. The will, which was made in 1914, provides that the property be divided as a whole. However, if the heirs prefer, each may take an individual share separately.

Title to the Kauffman residence at 23 Kingsbury place in the joint names of Mrs. Kauffman and her daughter, Mrs. Thompson, and sole title now passes to Mrs. Thompson by the death of her mother. Mrs. Thompson desires to remain in possession of the residence, the sum of $40,000 is to be charged against her interests in the estate for the purpose of equalizing the bequests left to her brother and sister. The residence was formerly the home of Clay Arthur Pierce and was purchased two years ago by Mrs. Kauffman. Harold Kauffman and Leslie H. Thompson were appointed executors of the will, which was filed for probate yesterday.

Mrs. Kauffman, who was 72 years old, died April 5. Her husband built and occupied as a residence the place which later became the home of the late King of the highway and Lindell boulevard. This house was recently dismantled for the construction of a hotel on the site.

'DECAMERON NIGHTS' MADE LESS
DARING FOR PRINCESS' BENEFITHer Presence at Opening Performance
Has a Highly Moral Effect,
But Has Set Gossips Going.

LONDON, April 22.—Princess Mary's presence at first nights seems to have a highly moral effect on the risqué plays, but the fact that the Princess should attend such shows has set London gossips going.

The Princess picked "Decameron Nights" for her first appearance at a theater since she married Viscount Lascelles. The reason for the Princess's presence at the show is not supposed to approve of royalty's presence at the opening performances of plays in which the costumes are as abbreviated as some of those in "Decameron Nights."

Princess Mary's arrival was confined to the management and there were some quick changes in the play. For instance, the entire prologue was cut out. It represented the king, as King of the East, in an Eve-like costume, washed up on a beach after a shipwreck. The management decided the prologue took too long.

Then later in the play an erring wife is stripped before the audience in front of St. Mark's as a punishment during this episode, but it was remarked that the lights went out much more quickly when the princess was present than during the dress rehearsal.

FOR SINGLE MORAL STANDARD

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst Speaks at Pan-American Conference.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 22.—Uplift, social and moral, was the keynote of both sessions of the Pan-American conference yesterday. Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst declared that "We must not skip over the surface and think we have done our part."

"Closing a few houses will not cure the situation," she said, "though it may alleviate it. We must go to the cause that underlies the traffic in human lives and men and women must cease to make concessions to the human nature of man. Our moral standards must be raised and there must be one moral standard for men and women alike. When they cease to sell themselves, the union of the sexes will produce a race physically and mentally perfect."

WIDOWER'S LITTLE VISIT TO END IN WEDDINGMan, 75, Comes Up to City for Week, Meets Widow, 80, and —Bells Ring Tomorrow.

When Robert Butcher, widower, 75, of Stewardson, Ill., came to St. Louis last Saturday for a little visit, he did not expect to be a happy bridegroom in a week, but that was the way it is turning out. He met Mrs. Bertha Beal, widow, 80, and finding himself still susceptible to feminine charms, he lost no time in wooing and winning her. Tomorrow the wedding bells will ring.

Butcher has been a widower, the second time, since October, and he found single life so lonesome that he came over last Saturday to visit his late stepson's wife, Mrs. Carrie Elsie, 2229 St. Vincent avenue, Sunday morning Mrs. Beal, who lives with her son, William Erwin, at 3223 St. Vincent, two doors away, dropped in to visit her neighbor, Mrs. Elsie, and the man from Stewardson was introduced to her. She reminded Butcher of his first wife. He says it was a case of love at first sight, and Mrs. Beal blushing acknowledged that she was smitten at about the same time.

Butcher pressed his suit so ardently that Tuesday he was able to announce that the widow had accepted to be his third wife. The wedding will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Erwin home.

Butcher admits it's a short engagement. "But at our ages," he says, "we haven't much time left, and we can't afford to waste any of it. Mrs. Beal was left alone and so was I, so we decided to live together."

Butcher has a daughter and a grandson. Mrs. Beal's second husband died seven years ago. She has a son and two grandchildren. The couple will leave immediately after the wedding for Stewardson, where they will live. Both of Mrs. Beal's grandchildren will attend the wedding. Butcher served during the Civil War under Gen. Sherman, in the regiment of Col. Benjamin Harrison, later President of the United States, and was wounded at the battle of Rappahannock.

LADY JOAN CAPELL ENGAGED

Second Daughter of Countess of Essex to Wed Former Officer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 21.—The engagement is announced of Lady Joan Capell to Herbert Parker, a former officer of the Coldstream Guards. Lady Joan is a second daughter of Adele, Countess of Essex, and the late Earl. Her mother is the daughter of the late Lord Beauchamp of Newhall. She is extremely popular in society, particularly in that circle in which Mrs. Asquith and Lady Diana Cooper shine.

The young woman is a clever amateur actress both on the stage and in the movies. The present Earl of Essex is also a good amateur actor; he leads the Pierrot troupe, called "The Canaries," at his seat in Herfordshire, where he appears for local charities. It is thought that Lady Joan would have taken a professional stage career but for the opposition of her family. She is fond of outdoor sports, and is a fine horsewoman.

CAMPAIGN FOR MASONIC TEMPLETemple Club Votes $1000 Toward Project, and Many Individuals

Evidence of co-operation in the Masonic Temple Building Fund Campaign are coming in from headquarters at Hotel Statler, not only from individuals, but from various groups.

The Temple Club, which is composed of the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of Shriners, and which meets in Moolah Temple, has voted out of its treasury $1000 to the fund. This gift is in addition to individual pledges the members may make as members of Eastern Star chapters.

Similar action was taken by Polar Star Chapter No. 124 of the Eastern Star. In addition to the individual subscriptions of members of the chapter, which will be made during the personal solicitation period beginning April 26, Polar Star has pledged a similar amount, and additional gifts from its members amounted to $1760, bringing the total given to date to $6950.

St. Louis Lodge and many of its members have taken a leading part in the temple movement. It originally pledged $19,285, and its members gave $16,735 in addition, which, added to the $3000 to be voted Wednesday evening, will bring the lodge's total gift to $39,020 for the temple building fund.

Attractive to Celestials.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Bright lights, joy rides and the movies have made a hit in China. Trade Commissioner Lynn W. Meekins reported from Shanghai today. Body Not to Be Moved.

PARIS, April 21.—The body of Marie Bonaparte, the brilliant Russian girl artist, diarist and musician, who died nearly 40 years ago, will remain in the Passy Cemetery. Her tomb occupies the largest plot in the cemetery, where burial fees have increased tenfold since she was buried. One branch of her family, which was reduced to poverty by the collapse of the ruble, wanted to sell the plot and bury the body. The other branch protested, and the body of the Seine has upheld the latter.

ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY ADDS TO ITS SUCCESS AT COE COLLEGEConcerts Received Enthusiastically
at Eleventh Annual Musical Festival at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., April 22.—The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, making its first appearance in this city as the feature of the eleventh annual music festival of Coe College, set a new standard in popularity of symphonic organizations. It played both matinee and evening concerts to capacity audiences at the Coe Chapel. From the time the conductor, Rudolph Ganz, appeared until after the final encore had echoed through the big college building, every number was accorded an ovation of such a nature as to make the orchestra's success in its appreciation and clamorous for more.

Cedar Rapids will welcome this orchestra, its conductor and its soloists, H. Max Steindler, cellist, and Ellen Rumsey, contralto. Marked by the masterful interpretation given by Conductor Ganz and the works of the strings and woodwinds. Beethoven's Fifth Symphony proved the feature of the afternoon program. Rendition of the second movement of this symphony, an arrangement of the "Pastorale," by the orchestra, was especially effective, though all four are worthy of much commendation.

The matinee opened with the overture, "Die Freischuetz," and concluded with Liszt's "The Prelude," both winning much praise. Mr. Steindler made a distinct hit in Beethoven's symphonic variations for cello and orchestra and was forced to respond to an encore, playing "The Swan," by Saint-Saens. Saint-Saens' "Le Rouet d'Omphale" was also a popular selection.

However, the audience showed its greatest appreciation over the overture, "The Flying Dutchman," simple and refreshing. A selection from "Mignon," to which Miss Rumsey's voice was well suited, was fully appreciated, coming after the overture. Miss Rumsey sang the aria, "Voce di Donna," from "La Gioconda," very effectively. The solemn but melodic "Choral Stanzas," by Brahms, which came between the arias, proved again the versatility of the orchestra.

WOMEN TO ASK FOR EQUAL POWER ON STATE COMMITTEE

committees, particularly along educational and organization lines.
Several candidates for State offices took advantage of the gathering of the women to press their claims. The only candidates who appeared in person were Judge Haywood Scott of Jefferson and Judge Hopkins B. Shain of Sedalia, candidates for the nomination for Judges of the Supreme Court. Senator William M. Bowker of Nevada, also a candidate for Supreme Judge, was represented by Mrs. Bowker and Commissioner Turner White of the Supreme Court, also a candidate for Judge, was represented by Miss Alice Barrett of Springfield.

Long headquarters in the Robideaux Hotel were opened during the day and were in charge of Mrs. Katherine Halterman of Mt. Vernon, one of the managers of the Long campaign, who is working exclusively among the women.
While no effort was made to test the comparative strength of Reed and Long among the 15 women present, it was evident from the general run of conversation among them that the sentiment was overwhelmingly against Reed. There was a delegation of six women from Kansas City, Reed's home, all of whom expressed themselves against Reed, while there were two others from Kansas City for him. One or two women from Northern Missouri counties were friendly to Reed.

This service to be constant and dependable must be based—first upon highest technical knowledge and second upon permanency of organization. There can be no lasting service in any manufactured article unless there be stamina in the organization that makes it.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has a long and honorable record in producing petroleum products of the highest quality.

This is because its organization is essentially scientific; because through a period of years it has built up a personnel of experts. These men know what the public demands from petroleum and they know how to create products which will supply this need.

Each product conforms to a standard, set to yield maximum service. The series of petroleum products made by this Company round out a cycle of service which supplies every need of the community.

As a specific example, take candles. One might think, that in these days of gas and electricity, the humble candle had been discarded, but it has not. Twenty-two million pounds of candles are consumed yearly in the United States, of which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) last year produced 7,649,000 pounds.

Thus, through the long list of products made by this Company, the needs of small groups of people throughout 11 Middle Western States are recognized and cared for with the same forethought and efficiency, as are the wholesale requirements of motorists and manufacturers. This too, is service.

Tom's popularity increased immensely when "the fellows" heard he was the owner of an earned "Jewel." Could they come over to his house? Would he let them "listen in?" We'll say they could and he would. Good natured, manly chap that he is, 'tis easy to realize that he found friends ready to help him earn his "Jewel" outfit.
